

O'LEARY AT HOME AGAIN.

[From the New York Times.]
 "How d'ye do? Do you want to see the belt?" said Dan O'Leary, the famous pedestrian, as he walked into the Metropolitan Hotel and cordially shook hands with the Times reporter yesterday. He was at once pounced upon by his backer, Mr. Smith, Mr. McSwyny, and a dozen other friends, and with a pleasant greeting for all, led the way to the lunch-room. Here McSwyny undid a long, narrow brown paper parcel, and revealed the championship belt, inclosed in a glass case. It was made of large silver plates, mounted upon the finest red leather, with a heavy gold centre-piece, upon which, in raised letters of gold, enamelled in black, was the inscription: "Long Distance Champion of the World." This is flanked by two silver plates, one bearing the raised figure of a running athlete and the other a pedestrian. Upon one of the end silver plates is engraved the inscription: "Presented by Sir J. D. Astley, Bart., M. P., March, 1878," while upon the adjoining plate is the legend: "Won by Daniel O'Leary, of Chicago, U. S. A., March 18th to 23d, 1878. Distance, 520½ miles in 138 hours and 48 minutes. Beating H. Vaughan, Chester 500 miles; H. Bower 'Blower' of Fulham, 476 miles and fifteen others." "There," said O'Leary, "is in the belt that I had some trouble to get even after I won it." His backer then explained that the managers of the race at Agricultural Hall had been extremely loath to allow the belt to leave the country, contending that O'Leary, who has to win two additional matches before he can be entitled to the belt, would have to contend for it in England. Finally, however, the managers allowed the winner to carry the trophy to America. These two matches are to be walked within eighteen months, the first match in case of a challenge being received by O'Leary, to be walked in three months, and the next within a year afterward. "I went over to the match," O'Leary continued, "if not confident of winning, at least determined to make a good record for myself. The report that I had the advantage of the track is not strictly true, for the man who surveyed the two tracks calculated that the other competitors had nine miles the advantage of me. After the second day Vaughan always had the inside of his track, the other competitors invariably turning out to give it to him." Vaughan, continued Mr. Smith, would have secured a fortune had he won the match, for countless sums were offered to him by English sporting men "to beat the Irishman" (O'Leary). A comment being made upon O'Leary's fine appearance after the extreme exertions he had undergone, the pedestrian laughed heartily and exclaimed, "Yes, I don't feel a bit exhausted, but just as fresh as if I had never undertaken thefeat. I never was better in my life." Upon being questioned as to his plans, he replied that he intended to make a short visit to Chicago, and then return to New York, where he would walk two weeks hence in Gilmore's Garden in response to the solicitation of many friends and sporting gentlemen. A superb bronze clock that has been presented to him by the citizens and public officials of Cork, Ireland, is retained on the Idaho, the revenue official refusing to pass it yet. It is an immense piece of workmanship as regards size, and very beautiful as regards its artistic appearance. The Stars and Stripes and American Eagle, with the Irish standard and harp, are grouped together over the top, with very picturesque effect.

"Are you trying to raise a mustache, my son?" kindly inquired a heavily whiskered father, the other morning, observing the young man scraping his face "in the place where the hair ought to grow." "Yes, Sir," mournfully replied the boy; "since you failed, it's about all I can raise."
